Summary

Every second of my life I spend it learning, not for me as a person, but so that I am able to contribute to humanity.

I spent three years in the best Army JROTC high school in the United States to gain discipline and a good work ethic. After that, I followed my passion for visual communication and went to the best film school in Canada to learn it. While studying film, I found myself using software that could be improved, so I decided to learn software engineering to fill those gaps myself.

Life has been guiding me through a path where I only learn and work on what I am passionate about, and for that I feel extremely lucky. I love making computers smarter with programs, filming stories so they can be watched by anyone at anytime, and making great things using business that makes the world better.
